

Restore Hyper Wellness — Brand Voice Guide

Brand essence

Restore Hyper Wellness exists to expand the limits of personal health and performance — helping people do more of what they love through personalized, science-backed therapies. The voice is the calm authority of a clinician who genuinely believes you'll feel better, paired with the warmth of a trusted advisor who's seen it work.

Educated, but never academic. Confident, but never hyped. The science is the ground; the benefit is the headline.

The one-sentence rule

Write like a clinician who's also a friend — credible enough to trust with your health, human enough to want around.

Core voice attributes

1. Clear and concise. Plain language, never jargon. "Boost circulation" beats "augment hemodynamic profile." If a 10-year-old wouldn't understand it, rewrite.
2. Conversational, never clinical. Talk to the client, not at them. Imagine the studio receptionist explaining a service, not a medical journal abstract.
3. Science-backed but warm. Cite the mechanism briefly, then translate it into a felt benefit. "Red and near-infrared light powers mitochondria" → "More energy. Better sleep. Less pain."
4. Active voice always. "Cryotherapy may help reduce inflammation" — not "inflammation may be reduced by cryotherapy."
5. Aspirational, never prescriptive. "May help you..." is the signature lead-in for every benefit claim. Never promise. Always invite.

Non-negotiables (every piece)

- Signature mission line, exact format: "Expanding the limits of personal health and performance to help people do more of what they love through personalized, science-backed therapies."
- Tagline, exact format: "Fuel Your Body. Feel the Results."

- Benefit lead-in, exact format: "{Therapy} may help to..." — every claim leads with this. Never "Cryotherapy reduces pain." Always "Cryotherapy may help to reduce pain."
- Use: therapies, clients, studios, nutrients, Members, Membership, certified Nurses
- Never: modalities, customers, stores, ingredients, patients (use clients), participants
- Capitalize: Clients, Membership, Members, Cryotherapy, Red Light Therapy, Infrared Sauna, Compression, IV Drip Therapy, IV Drips, Drips, Mild Hyperbaric Oxygen Therapy (mHbOT — always include "Mild"), NAD+ IV, Niagen (NR) IV, GLP-1 Plans, Hydrafacial™
- No Oxford commas. "Hydrate, replenish and recover" — not "Hydrate, replenish, and recover." Scan every list before shipping. Multi-word list items count too: "athletic performance, focus and energy" — not "athletic performance, focus, and energy."
- Active voice always. "Our certified Nurses administer every Drip" — not "Drips are administered by certified Nurses."
- AP Style. Numerals for time, ages, percentages, dates, money. Hyphenate compound modifiers before nouns (10-year-old runner). No hyphens after -ly adverbs (highly rated product).
- Em dashes — no spaces on either side (exception to AP Style). Use sparingly: 1–2 per piece max.
- No semicolons. Use periods or em dashes instead.
- Exclamation points: keep to a minimum. Maximum 1 per piece. Never !! .
- Title Case for marketing headlines. Capitalize prepositions of 4+ letters (With, From, Over, Into, Between). Lowercase shorter prepositions (of, to, in, on) unless first or last.
- Trademarks intact. Hydrafacial™, Neveskin™, NormaTec, etc. — include marks on first mention.

Channel cheat-sheet

Channel	Top rule
Website	Lead with benefit. Pair every claim with proof or “may help to...” Cream surfaces for warmer copy blocks.
Instagram	Aspirational, lifestyle-forward. Title Case captions. Affirmation closer when natural. Limit emojis to 0–2 per post.
Facebook	Story-driven. Member testimonials work well. Longer-form OK. Include CTA + studio locator.
TikTok	Hook in 2 seconds. Educational (“3 ways Red Light Therapy may help to...”) or transformation-narrative. Lifestyle, never clinical.
Email	Subject line: clear benefit, no clickbait. Open Sans body. Signature: certified Nurse or Studio Manager. Lead with what’s in it for the client.
Paid Ads	Compliance-first. Meta safe zones respected. No needles. Nurses in gloves for medical therapies. Before/after only as problem/solution narrative — never side-by-side comparison.
In-Studio	Higher density. Service descriptions can run longer. Always include disclaimer.
B2B / Franchise	Less aspirational, more operational. Lean on Member metrics, retention rates, AUV stats.

Generation protocol

1. Identify the therapy + audience. Which therapy is this for? Skin Health client, athletic recovery, longevity-focused, or proactive wellness?
2. Lead with the benefit, never the brand. What does this client get?
3. Use the “may help to...” formula for every claim. No exceptions.
4. Active voice, contractions where appropriate. “You’ll feel” reads better than “you will feel” in social/email; stay full-word in clinical descriptions.
5. Run the editing protocol (load `references/editing.md`). Every piece gets a final pass.

When to load references

- `references/editing.md` — load on every piece for the final edit pass. Also when revising existing copy.
- `references/examples.md` — load when output sounds generic, calibration feels off, or you want to pattern-match against known-good before drafting.
- `references/channels.md` — load when the prompt names a channel and you need more than the cheat-sheet row above (full ad compliance, per-platform conventions, common-scenario templates).
- `references/vocabulary.md` — load when uncertain about a word choice, when you need the full forbidden/preferred terminology table, signature phrases, therapy-specific approved claims, or brand stats for proof points.
